Miss Clara Knopf, Harold E. Gardner Are Engaged

Announcement of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Clara Jeanette Knopf, to Harold E. Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Gardner, Campbell, was the surprise climax of a charming dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Max M. Knopf at their home on San Jose avenue recently.

Guests included members of the immediate family and a few close friends. Table appointments of holiday favors and decorations added beauty to the evening.

Miss Knopf is a popular member of Campbell and San Jose younger circles. She graduated from Campbell high school in 1929, afterwards graduating from Heald's business college. '33 Phone Almanac Ready at Company's Business Office Here

Telling the story of 'Kit Carson's little-known exploit in carrying the news of the gold discovery from California to Washington, D. C., and the story of how Los Angeles, 51 years ago, substituted the telephone for roaring six-shooters as a fire alarm system the 1933 Telephone Almanac is ready for free distribution at the business office of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company.

Useful old almanac stand-bys, such as a list of the "Morning and Evening Stars" for the year, the stories behind the names of the months, and the national holidays, a Rebus page, eclipses, chronological eras, and signs of the Zodiac, all are included in the new almanac. It also contains many facts concerning Pacific coast history.

This is the tenth year the almanac has been issued.

Husted Circulates Extension Petition In Prospect District

The West Campbell avenue extension, connecting Campbell directly with Prospect road and with the Saratoga-Mountain View highway, became a distinct possibility today as Ralph Husted, Pierce road rancher, began the circulation of a petition for the road among residents of the Saratoga-Prospect district.

Under the leadership of Al Covey the signature on the petition of every business man on Campbell avenue had been previously obtained.

Santa Clara county supervisors will act on the petition when it is presented at their first meeting in February.

Chamber of commerce officials in Campbell believe the time to be ripe for the construction of the artery. Low land values will make it possible to secure the roadway which will cut a 4,500 foot track through the Fellows ranch, for perhaps less than $4,000 while in 1924 it would have cost about $32,000.

The expense of road construction will not add to the taxes of local property holders, according to H. M. Shadle, president of the chamber of commerce. Part of the Santa Clara county share of the gas tax will pay for the Campbell avenue extension.

Current Comment

A picture house is about to be inflicted upon the neighboring city of Willow Glen, and we predict a dull season for the patrons thereof. Our opinion is substantiated by the report that the city fathers of that fair metropolis are already considering candidates for a local board of censors. And that's all it takes to remove the cream from the modern films. (We were just wishing someone would have the crust to suggest that we pass on what other intelligent adults should or should not see.)

While we're on the subject of theaters, we'd like to register a protest against the vigor with which members of the California orchestra play their instruments particularly when a performer is endeavoring to gain the attention of the audience. A short while ago a blond "shouter" with a pleasing throaty voice, did her best to hurl the "St. Louis Blues" across the footlights. The orchestra was too powerful, however, and one had to be content with an occasional word which escaped the murderous clutches of the "musicians."

"Technocracy" is a word which seems to have a lot of folks more or less "ga-ga" these days. It seems to be a word describing a state of government advised by technicians in all branches of human endeavor. Such a state, according to its adherents, or "technocrats," would lead the people of the world to the much sought after millenium. As such it should be subscribed to by everybody who harbors no desire to wind up in the poor house, for its a sure thing that technical brains couldn't possibly make a greater hash of world affairs than have statesmen and politicians.

The editor's desk is simply littered with propaganda regarding the state tax situation. Various organizations are demanding that this or that shall be done to relieve the taxpayer, and various legislators are pointing the finger of scorn at proposed remedies, and offering substitutes of their own manufacture. It looks like a long, hard pull, with the state's lawmakers drawing their per diem until way into the spring.

The soultion to our nation-wide hardtimes will not, in our opinion, be found in the balancing of state and national budgets and the reduction of taxes, although the latter would help somewhat. Particularly the saving which could be effected through the abolition of many useless or near useless bureaus, state and national. Any cuts made in taxation, excluding that affecting the schools, should be permanent even in good times.

As stated above, tax cutting isn't going to bring back "prosperity." Beer, and balancing the budget, the new administration will discover, won't help the national situation at all. To start thing moving in the United States the federal government must prepare itself to spend ten or fifteen billions of dollars in public works.

That, folks, would bring a return of prosperity; it would raise federal taxes, but who ever cried about taxes when money wasn't so scarce?

With millions of dollars being paid out every month, with the vast army of unemployed back to work, it would be but a short time before privately controlled industry would start up with renewed vigor. Plenty of money in circulation, with a chance of laying hands on a bit of it is the only solution —and where is it coming from, if not from the federal government?

If the new administration is big enough to see it, and if the people will only realize that theyv'e got to pay the piper for the Wall Street waltz of '28-'29, Washington solons may take the situation in hand and start the ball a'rolling. How about it?

Club Talkers Prove Varied Character Of State Industries

The subject "Industries of Northern California" as developed by the comittee in charge of the program at Monday's meeting of the Country Woman's club proved very interesting. As indicated by the chairman's introductory notes, with the "industries of Southern California," to be considered at a later meeting, our state could practically maintain itself, except for iron ore and a few other articles.

Mrs. Mary Lanphear, chairman, was unable to be present on account of illness, but the members of her committee served very ably.

Mrs. Robert Shearer read a fine paper summarizing the various branches of industry in this part of the state, beginning with the agriculture of the early missions, followed by the mining furor; then the great cattle raising period which again was superseded by general farming and fruit raising. She mentioned our great lumber industry, the development of hydro electric power, the great canning industry including that of olives and asparagus which are practically confined to this one of the United States, and the great growth in machine shop and ship building plants.

The development of the rice industry in California was presented very entertainingly by Mrs. S. N. Hedegard, whose husband has engaged in that business for a number of years.She described the preparation of the fields, the sowing by airplane, harvesting of the crop and final handling. She had just enough statistics and prices to give her hearers a much better idea of the costs of production and the financial situation of the rice growers than they had before.

Another industry, the details of which were not farmilar to most of the members, was outlined by Mrs. Louis Shelley: sheep raising.

According to the latest chart prepared by the wool growers' association, California has reached first place in the number of sheep, surpassing Montana by some 10 000.

Three varieties of sheep were named, the Merino, brought from Spain; the Rambouillet from France; and the Shropshire, one of several varities coming from England.

Sheep are raised for their wool, skin, tallow and meat. Mrs. Shelley explained the kinds of wool produced, and described a shearing time, as witnessed by herself on a big sheep ranch. She had many samples of the products of the woolen mills, showing how different treatment and different grades of wool result in different fabrics.

Mrs. H. W. Morton acted as hostess for the day.

The club joined in singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "Long, Long Ago," led by Mrs. H. M. Shadle, with Mrs. D. H. Cramer as pianist.

Next Monday, Jan. 16, the meeting will be in charge of Mrs. C. H. Whitman.

P. T. A. Observes Juvenile Club Demonstration

The value of Camp Fire girls and Boy Scouts in juvenile and adolescent lives was effectively demonstrated at the regular meeting of the grammar school Parent Teachers' association held Tuesday afternoon at the grammar school.

Duncan McKinley, Boy Scout executive, talked on scouting. Local Boy Scouts, under the leadership of the Rev. J. H. Bennett, gave a demonstration of their activities and accomplishments.

Mrs. Edna Sefton, Santa Clara county Campfire Girl executive, described her work. A group of local Camp Fire girls, garbed in ceremonial gowns, gave graphic display of the symbols and activities of their organization.

Mrs. Harry Rediker, presiding over the regular business meeting concluded plans for a friendship dinner, to be held Feb. 10.

Mrs. H. H. Allen, chairman of the next meeting, announced that at that time Founders' day would be celebrated. She urged the members to invite all former P. T. A. members, particularly the ex-presidents.

The speaker on that occasion will be Mrs. T. M. Wright, the first president of a P. T. A. in the county.

It was reported that three new members had been gained, bringing the total membership to 93, which is far short of last year's membership.

Punditas Convene At Stray Home Mrs. Allen Talks

Describing the "Queen of the American stage," Miss Katherine Cornell, Mrs. Laura Allen presented a paper on drama at the meeting of the Pundita circle held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Walter H. Stray, second street.

Mrs. Allen and Mrs. George W. Page assisted Mrs. Stray in entertaining the club members.

Interesting and effectively written were Mrs. Allen's papers. She first outlined "Recent Manhattan Plays and Players," and in a second paper gave "An Explosion of Plays and the Life of the Queen of the American Stage, Katherine Cornell."

During the interlude between the two topics, Miss Katherine Wood presented two piano solos, "Prelude in F Sharp Major," and "Prelude in C Minor." At the conclusion of the program she played "Crapshooter," and "Harmonica Player."

The Pundita members convened in a beautiful setting Wednesday. The Stray residence was profusely decorated with toyon berries. During the refreshment hour fruit salad, salted wafers, home made cakes, nuts and stuffed prunes in rose cups were served on delicate pink trays. Favors of holiday-colored whistle balloons added much amusement.

The next meeting of the club will be held Jan. 25 at the home of Mrs. Wendell C. Thomas the Alameda, San Jose. Miss Katherine Wood and Mrs. George Smith Jr. will assist the hostess in presenting the afternoon's topic, "Music."

New Year Hailed With Merry Party At Burrows Home

Following a happy custom of several years, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Burrows entertained friends at a New Year's eve party at their home on San Tomas road.

Graceful sprays of toyon berries were used as the table centerpeice and the crimson berries formed novelty favors for the guests. Auction bridge occupied the evening until the New Year was initiated with noise makers and appropriate songs.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. James Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell C. Thomas, San Jose; Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Carboni, Mrs. Emma S. Dalvit, Mrs. Laura Schulte Allen. and the Misses Anne Schulte and Helah Laird.

THE FARMERS CORNER

By Ralph H. Taylor

Can the state balance its budget, in the face of steadily falling revenues, without levying additional taxes?

If so, how?

And if not, what new forms of taxation are politically and economically possible?

With the state legislature in its second week and no agreement on economy and tax legislation yet in prospect, such are the questions which have crowded all other issues into the back ground at the 1933 meeting of the California lawmakers.

Tax reduction proposals, tax equalization bills and new prospective revenue measures to avert a bankrupt general fund are appearing this session in greater profusion and greater variety than at any other session in the recent history of the state.

At least a dozen complete tax and economy programs have thus far made their appearance, sponsored by state-wide organizations and leading officals, among these being plans advanced by the state chamber of commerce, the Common Property Tax Payers of California, the California Farm Bureau Federation, the California State Tax Coordinating committee, representing tax groups in 24 counties, and the individual programs suggested by Governor Rolph, Senator Arthur H. Breed, president pro tem of the senate, and State controller Ray L. Riley.

The programs, while differing radically in many particulars, all recognize the fact that government has become top-heavy and must undergo major reductions. They disagree, however, in the degree of economy proposed and in the method of achieving it.

There is also general agreement, for the most part, that something must be done about fixed charges, either through curtailment or priations under control of the legislature.

Major points of disagreement, looking at the problem in its broadest aspect, seem to center:

First, on whether it is possible and desirable to balance tthe budget by economy alone. There are some groups which contend that new taxes must not be imposed, regardless of how drastic governmental curtailment must be to gain a balance between expenditures and reduced income. And there are other groups and individuals which contend that it is physically, economically and politically impossible to carry on without additional taxes, no matter how objectionable new revenue measures may be.

Second, there is wide divergence of opinion on the means to be employed in achieving economy. Proposals for shifting state costs to the counties and cities, for instance, will be vigorously opposed by representatives of agriculture as merely transfering the load back where it is already the heaviest. There are programs, also, which call for flat percentage slashes in the budgets of all agencies, whether "fixed" or under control of the legislature, this to be accomplished by constitutional amendments. And there are other schemes for eliminating the least necessary functions entirely while still cutting general government to the bone.

With increasing indications that the legislature or the administration will be forced to get additional revenues somewhere, the greatest difference of opinion is on the simple yet difficult question: "Who shall pay?"

In answer to that question agriculture has more at stake than in the solution of any other problem before the present legislature. Additional taxation, to thousands of California farmers, would amount to confiscation.

High School Fives Down Morgan Hill InFriday's Contests

Gaining a firmer hold on tthe top place of their divisions in the Santa Clara Valley League, the Campbell High school basketball teams, coached by Ralph Noddin, defeated Coach Rube Woods' Live Oak teams in a double header played last Friday night on the Campbell court.

The unlimited team furnished surprise ending, when the locals rallied after the score was against them and finished the game 18 to 11, in their favor. The lightweights met less competition, running up a score of 17 to 8.

High point men on the unlimited team were Vincent Buccellato, who tossed three field goals, and Francis Pryor, who added two field goals and two free throws to his teams' score.

Melvin DeSelle was the outstanding player on the 130-pound team putting in three field goals and three free throws.

Horace Person, forward, Vincent Buccelato, forward, Francis Pryor, center, Fred Hocking, guard Joe Ruscigno, guard, and Byron Bollinger forward, played for the unlimiteds.

Lightweights in Friday's game were Melvin DeSelle, Joseph Condensa, and Marrone, forwards, Hugh Cramer, center, Robert Mattish, Julio Condensa and Verlyn Fellman, guards.

The two teams meet Santa Clara high fives Friday night in the Campbell gymnasium.

Santa Clara is rumored to possess one of the strongest teams in the league and they're coming to Campbell hopeful of knocking them out of their high place in the league. The games should be exciting.

Coach Ralph Noddin's starters will be: 130 lb.—Melvin Deselle, Joe Condensa, forwards; Julio Condensa, Robert Mattish, guards; Antone Lobrovich, center.

Unlimiteds—Vincent Buccelato, Byron Bollinger, forwards; Fred Hocking and Joe Ruscigno, guards and Francis Pryor, center.
